Rev. Mr. Melton Preaches Sermon of Much Interest to Congregation

"Neither was the man created for the oman; but the woman for the man."-

"Neither was the man created for the woman; but the woman for the man."

I Cor, xi;9-was the text upon which Rev- B. H. Melton, pastor of the Marshall Street Christian Charch, based his sermon last night. He said in part:

"In these words Paul gives us his teaching as to the mission of woman. She is not to be man's slave. Her mission is grander than that. She is to live for man, so as to ennoble and beautify his character, to make him more worthy of a place in God's universe. A woman has wonderful power either to degrade or elevate a man. When this power is used wrongly, it destroys, degrades and brings to shame. Ahab was destroyed by a bad woman. Herod was influenced by a woman to kill John the Baptist; Peter was afraid of a girl's mocking voice and jeering laugh, and he denied sunday words are situated in Mexico;"

The Woman and the Case Involving the Honor of Five Legal Luminaries

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

NEW YORK, February 25.—What promises to become another metropolitan scandal of ugly proportions has been partly divested of its outward trappings by a beautiful woman, whose disclosures to date virtually represent an attack upon the integrity of a former Governor of New York State, a former district attorney of New York county, a lawyer political leader, who once stood high in the councils of New York county, a lawyer political leader, who once stood high in the councils of his party, and two legal lights of almost national reputation. The woman is Mrs.

sociation in its work of prevention and uplift, especially in the United States and Canada, are attracting the attention of the philanthropic world. A little more than fifty years ago this organization found a footing in this country, and today there are 1,800 associations, with a membership of over 100,000 men and boys. At the beginning the work was largely religious. No other lines of work were attempted. In a few years the social element was introduced through definite effort. Then came the great work of the physical department, and last, but not least, the educational work. So that this organization of to-day, the representative of all the churches and the business ative of all the churches and the business community, offers to young men and boys every facility for development in body, mind and spirit.

One of the first associations to be organized in America was the Richmond Association. From the very beginning men of strong character have been connected with the Richmond Association. To-day it stands in the front rank with the leading associations of the land, and has grown until the work is seriously humpered by the limitations of the present building.

humpered by the limitations of the present building.

Of this more will be said in the near future. All these years the work has been supported by membership fees and contributions on the part of the business community. Some have wondered why this should be. The Finance Committee has recently issued a very compact statement, in which it is clearly set forth that all organizations of an educational or preventive character are supported in part by volunteer contributions. From the best possible available information, it is found that a college education is at the command of a young man only because of the gifts from the State or individuals, and through contributions and endowments. At Columbia it costs $1,400 annually per student in excess of the amount paid by the student; at Cornell, $1,200; at Princeton, $250; University of Virginia, $151; Virginia Polytechnic Institute, $113, and so on.

The directors of the association, in their appeal for current expense funds for the year ending next Wednesday, set forth the fact that were it not for such contributions, every college would have to shut its doors in the face of worthy young men, and that the association is only able to keep the membershop fee within reach of the association is only able to keep the membershop fee within reach of the association. freely discussed in the British and some other foreign press, and very generally in this country. As a result, attention has been sharply drawn to the opportunities for labor in Virginia, there is much correspondence on the subject going on, and many persons are likely to come here to seek the labor that awaits them. Many will come to invest and to work their own farms, which is the very best result of all. Lottie Williams at Bijou.

The gifted and inspiring little artist. Miss Lottie Williams, has closed her tour with her success, 'Only a Shop-Girl,' which has held the public attention for so many seasons. Miss Williams has become the star of the new play, 'My Tom-Boy Girl,' which will be the attraction at the Bijou all of this week.

This latest production by Charles E. Blaney promises to be a repetition of Miss Wiliams' former success, for Mr. Blaney has proved conclusively his excellent judgment, his deep insight, his far-reaching range and unlimited resources for producing a play to meet the requirements of an artist like Miss Williams.
